DeFinis Communications Announces Fall 2009 Public Seminar Schedule

Gain Competitive Advantage with Professional Public Speaking and Presentation Skills Training

San Francisco, CA (August 2009) – Being a polished public speaker is a requirement for today's business professionals. Unfortunately, the majority of business people admit that they dread public speaking and devote little time to preparation. As a result, they're not getting their ideas across, not being recognized for their expertise, and in many cases, not advancing in their career the way they would like.

To help today's business leaders, DeFinis Communications, a business consulting firm in the San Francisco Bay Area that offers a full range of professional public speaking programs, products, and services, has released their Fall 2009 public seminar schedule. They will offer two powerful programs geared for different audiences:

- Building Professional Presence is their new, one-day program designed to give a general audience exposure to the best practices of creating and delivering powerful presentations. During this lively and educational session for up to twenty-five participants, individuals engage in activities and exercises designed to help them understand the fundamental principles of public speaking.
